

to be issued manually. They tend to wait rather until they process all their IRP5s together at year-end. This means that executors experience delays in finalising estates, and heirs are unable to obtain their inheritance on which they are often totally dependant. FISA therefore appeals to all employers to assist executors by reviewing their processes in order to be able to provide these documents as quickly as possible.

Angélique Visser is chair of the Fiduciary Institute of South Africa (FISA).